

Denisha “Bunmi” Abrams is a performer originally from Hartford, Connecticut and has been exposed to the arts as long as she can remember. Her introduction to West African dance began in high school via a community outreach rites of passage program sponsored by the Artists Collective cultural institution. It was there that the passion for cultural arts education grew, which led Bunmi to pursue a Bachelor’s of Science in Marketing with a minor in Theatre. Through the years Bunmi has volunteered for arts organizations, performed in various productions, and has directed performing arts -based after-school and summer programs. She is currently a member of Manga African Dance, Inc. based out of Atlanta, Georgia. Bunmi is an artist that loves to educate using performing arts as the medium.
